Appropriate design

Good design is appropriate to its context.

Global designs

What of designs such as the mobile phone, which are used globally in almost every human context - do they disprove the need for appropriate technology and appropriate design?

Not at all - the mobile phone is still essentially appropriate to human scale and essential human needs and desires, i.e. communication and convenience.