OVERCOMING HECTIC ACTIVITIES

Now that the semester is almost done, I realized many things in the life of being a senior high school student .Positive at the same time Negative. Positive because I've become better person , I know how to handle overload activities. Negative because of plenty activities I don't have enough sleep at night , I don't have time for myself, family and friends. When it comes to group activities we should have a group work at the same time we should set our goals as a group. One of the most challenging moments I encounter in making our group activity is not communicating well in my group mates. It's been solved by talking to each other about the said topic. The most important learning is everything because every day is another day for learning new things. Want to learn. I learn to manage my own time and I realize that whatever problem the group will face we can solved it by being stick together. In facing a big problem I realize that there no easy way or short cuts to success and the best solution is just believe in your group mate. In this world that full of challenges you should always do your best and God will do the rest .My team communicate will because we make sure that everything is according to our goal. The collaborative communication fall short is when a member did not communicate will.

Learning anything comes with some kind of laborer whether it's time spent, a search for meaning, or a simple struggle to understand. Every learner is different, and with those differences eventually will come the process of overcoming learning barriers of every definition. You won't always see them coming if you're a teacher, but there are ways to h If there's anyone who can understand the difficulty of finding a balance between work, school and that thing called life, it's me. As someone who had to play the balancing act between three jobs and a more than full-time school schedule, I struggled to have any time for life. As the old saying goes "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," in this case it made Amber a very crazy, stressed, exhausted college student. Help your learners get over them.
