This year so far has been a blast. I have learned a lot, done a lot, and studied a lot. All the projects given so far was just right, not too many, not too much, not too hard, not too easy. To further elaborate I respond to it positively since the time given for each project has been more than adequate. The only problem is us the students since we tend to procrastinate.

During the E-tech subject period. I have discovered a lot of things. For the problems, proper time management is all you really need. For myself, I discovered that I have to adapt to changes quickly. For others, I learned that everyone should set aside their differences if you want things to go smoothly.

One of the most challenging and powerful learning moments was during the creation of the blogsites. There were so many options to choose from but in the end I chose Wix since it is the best for designing. I learned that in the many diverse options you have, you can only choose one.

The most important thing that I have personally learned is that sometimes you have to swallow your pride to make things work.

One of the biggest problems I face was when one of the members did not cooperate. The solution was simple: remove him from the group. This can be related in real life as not everyone will be what you think they should be. Sometimes you have no choice.

Overall, the communication with my group was very good. Sure sometimes there were lapses especially when we decide to just sit back and waste time but we still got the job done.
