My Learning Experience During The Second Semester

When the second semester started, the first thing that I experienced in our empowerment technology subject was making our first website. I was thrilled with the thought that we're making our first website because I want to know how did people make their website.

When sensei said we will make it through HTML, the first thing that comes up to my mind was 'what is HTML?' then when sensei gave us a video tutorial on how to make it that was the time I got it while watching the video. It was kind of hard because you need to put somewhat called codes before you will put a heading or description you want to put on your website, but it was fun at the same time because after typing the codes and the description, you'll feel the satisfaction and fulfillment after seeing the result of your work.
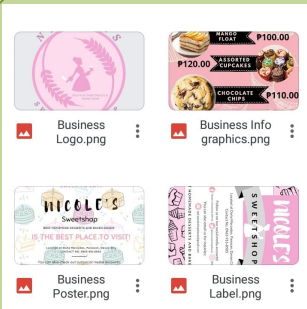

Furthermore, I also learned how to create a logo, infographic, poster, and label for my future business. This experience taught me to be creative, you need to make your own design to capture your customer's heart. I also discover a new skill by learning this experience.

I realized that learning graphic design is helpful especially if you have a plan to build a business someday if you know how to create a logo and stuff by yourself, you can save your money in paying for making logos and other stuff for your business. Then, after creating a logo, infographic, poster, and label, I also experienced making hyperlinks on my website to insert the graphics design I made. It was kind of confusing if you will not watch the video tutorial completely, but when you learned it, it will be easy for you to insert it.
Lastly, the use of social media as a platform to promote advocacy that helps our community. This experience was fantastic I could say, it is not easy to create advocacy that will gave a big impact on our community because for me, creating advocacy should be an eye-opener and a benefit to all of us.

What I realized about this learning experience was that social media should not also be for expressing your emotions, thoughts, or opinions but we should also use it as a platform to share good vibes as well as to advocate awareness in our community with the use of social media.